Introduction

Please note: In order to ensure a fair and transparent consultation process only responses received through our online questionnaire will be taken into account and included in the report summarising the responses. Fighting tax evasion and avoidance is essential to secure greater fairness and economic efficiency in the EU's internal market. The public has become more sensitive to tax fairness issues in the context of increased pressure on public finance at times when large multinational enterprises can reduce the amount of corporate income tax to single-digit percentages. Corporate income tax avoidance is thought to deprive EU Member States' public budgets of billions of euros every year.

Aggressive tax planning, harmful tax regimes and tax fraud all rely on an environment of opacity, complexity and non-cooperation. Taxation is at the core of countries' sovereignty, and the interaction of different national tax rules remains a source of discrepancies and frictions. This may lead to harmful tax competition. Some enterprises rely on the complexity of tax rules and the lack of cooperation between Member States to shift profits in order to minimise their taxes. Large multinational companies may engage in aggressive tax planning due to their presence in several jurisdictions, which SMEs and natural persons typically do not have. This can lead to distortions of the internal market and the level playing field between taxpayers.

On 18 March 2015, the Commission presented a package of measures to boost tax transparency, concentrating on the most urgent issues and including a proposal for the automatic exchange of information on cross-border tax rulings between Member States. The package is complemented by the Action Plan adopted on 17 June. The main objective of the initiative is to explain the Commission's vision for a fair and efficient corporate tax system in the EU and beyond.

The Commission wants to move to a system on the basis of which the country where a business' profits are generated is also the country of taxation (see A New Start for Europe: Political Guidelines for the next European Commission - July 2014). An impact assessment is being prepared under the aegis of the Communication and Action Plan to assess whether and how further corporate tax transparency, exposing enterprises to more intense scrutiny on the part of authorities or by different stakeholders, would contribute to this objective. Such scrutiny would rely on information being made available either to tax authorities or to the public. More specifically, it could ensure compliance with tax laws, dis-incentivise tax avoidance and increase pressure on States to take appropriate measures. The corresponding detailed objectives would be:

1. To increase pressure on enterprises to geographically align taxes paid in a country with actual profits, through enhanced scrutiny and decisions of either citizens or tax authorities (“enterprises should pay tax where they actually make profit”);
2. To increase public or peer pressure on countries to take measures that contribute to more efficient and fairer tax competition between Member States, thus ensuring that the country where profits are generated is also the country of taxation (“Member States should stop harmful tax competition”);
3. To assist tax authorities in orienting their tax audits in view of targeting tax evasion and avoidance, i.e. business decisions whereby tax liabilities are circumvented (“help tax authorities orientate their audits on enterprises”);
4. To align corporate tax planning practices with multinational enterprises' own commitment / statement to corporate responsibility, such as their contribution to local and social development (“enterprises should act as they communicate in terms of contribution to welfare through taxation”);
5. To ensure that enterprise structures and investments are more founded on economic motivations and not exclusively on corporate tax-related motivations (“enterprises should structure their investments based on real economic reasons, not just to avoid taxes”);
6. To remedy market distortions based on corporate intransparency and multinational companies' comparative advantage over SMEs when engaging in aggressive tax planning (“fairer competition between multinational enterprises and SMEs”)

This consultation will help the Commission gather and analyse the necessary evidence to determine possible options to attain those objectives.

Transparency on taxes paid to governments, in the form of country by country reporting, already exists for financial institutions established in the EU under the Capital Requirement Directive¹ with a view to regain trust in the financial sector. Large extractive and logging industries will also soon have to report their payments to governments on a country-by-country basis under the Accounting Directive² and the Transparency Directive³. The latter aims mainly to allow local communities of resource-rich countries to know about payments made to their governments, so that these can be better held to account.

The increased public concern regarding fair taxation in today's difficult economic environment is also felt beyond the European Union. Base erosion and profit shifting (BEPS) have preoccupied governments around the world. OECD and G20 countries will finalise by the end of 2015 a 15-point Action Plan on these issues as part of a BEPS Project. Once agreed, it should lead in the coming years to legal requirements in each participant jurisdiction and to tax treaties, possibly including a multilateral instrument – however, it must be noted that OECD and G20 countries are not obliged to follow or implement the recommendations of the BEPS project, and that not all EU Member States are OECD members. Some of the recommendations will be connected to corporate transparency (e.g. actions 5, 12, 13). Assuming that all G20 and OECD countries will implement BEPS action 13 on country-by-country reporting, very large multinational enterprises with turnover above €750m would have to provide a Country-By-Country Report (CBCR) to the relevant tax authority from 2017 onwards. Tax authorities would then share the CBCR submitted to them with the objective to perform a more substantial risk assessment in the area of transfer pricing. The information provided would not be available to the public.

This consultation wants to gather views in particular on the following:

- Transparency by whom? Transparency could be required from different kinds of companies, varying e.g. in size, location and extent of cross-border business. Light has been shed recently on cases involving non-EU multinational enterprises operating through branches or subsidiaries in the EU. A key question is whether these enterprises should, if feasible, be covered by any EU attempt to extend corporate tax transparency. In view of this, the consultation aims inter alia to examine the risks implied by a distorted level playing field between EU and non-EU enterprises.
- Transparency towards whom? Enhanced transparency could be vis-à-vis tax authorities or could include the wider public.
- Transparency of what type of information? The type of information to be disclosed might concern tax rulings, CBCR, statements or other types of information given by enterprises - there is a range of possibilities in terms of the degree of detail and scope of information that could be sought.

This consultation document sets out a number of tentative options. One of the key questions to be considered in relation to these options is whether (i) to follow up or implement the new OECD recommendation in the context of action 13 either at national or EU level which would mean to improve information exchange between tax authorities and (ii) whether to disclose certain tax information to the public, for example by extending requirements on country-by-country reporting currently in place for financial institutions to all other sectors. Respondents are encouraged to propose other relevant options if they wish. This public consultation also seeks views on the potential impact of enhanced tax transparency.

Glossary

Aggressive tax planning (see also: Tax planning):

In the Commission Recommendation on aggressive tax planning (C(2012) 8806 final), aggressive tax planning is defined as “taking advantage of the technicalities of a tax system or of mismatches between two or more tax systems for the purpose of reducing tax liability. Aggressive tax planning can take a multitude of forms. Its consequences include double deductions (e.g. the same loss is deducted both in the state of source and residence) and double non-taxation (e.g. income which is not taxed in the source state is exempt in the state of residence)”.

Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS Project):

Tax planning strategies that exploit gaps and mismatches in tax rules to artificially shift profits to low or no-tax locations where there is little or no economic activity, resulting in little or no overall corporate tax being paid. The OECD has developed specific actions to give countries the tools they need to ensure that profits are taxed where economic activities generating the profits are performed and where value is created, while at the same time giving enterprises greater certainty by reducing disputes over the application of international tax rules, and standardising requirements.

Tax avoidance:

According to the OECD glossary of tax terms, tax avoidance is defined as the arrangement of a taxpayer's affairs in a way that is intended to reduce his or her tax liability and that although the arrangement may be strictly legal is usually in contradiction with the intent of the law it purports to follow.

Tax evasion:

According to the OECD glossary of tax terms, tax evasion is defined as illegal arrangements where the liability to tax is hidden or ignored. This implies that the taxpayer pays less tax than he or she is legally obligated to pay by hiding income or information from the tax authorities.

Tax planning (see also: Aggressive tax planning):

According to the OECD glossary of tax terms, tax planning is an arrangement of a person's business and/or private affairs in order to minimize tax liability.

Tax ruling:

It entails any communication or any other instrument or action with similar effects, by or on behalf of the Member State regarding the interpretation or application of tax laws: Under this definition, all sorts of rulings are covered irrespective of its qualification within a Member State. The definition is therefore not limited to those communications in which there is exercise of discretion by a tax authority.

2. Your opinion

Introductory questions

 1. In terms of corporate tax transparency, which of the following assertions would you support?

- a. Current tax transparency requirements in the EU are sufficient (In the EU, enterprises have to make public their annual financial statement and consolidated financial statement which contains limited information on taxes. In addition, a country-by-country reporting has to be prepared and made public by extractive and forestry industries under the Accounting and Transparency Directives. And finally, financial institutions have to prepare and make public annually a country-by-country reporting under the Capital Requirement Directive)
- b. The EU should try to achieve that further transparency initiatives are taken at international level, but it should not act alone and should leave the implementation to Member States
- c. The EU should implement international initiatives (e.g. BEPS...) at the same pace and to the same extent as its global partners in order to ensure a level playing field
- d. The EU should be in the forefront and possibly go beyond the current initiatives at international level, for example by extending the current requirements to disclose tax information to the public to all other sectors
- e. No opinion
- f. Other

2. A possible new EU initiative on corporate tax transparency would aim at a spectrum of objectives.

2A) Do you agree with the following objectives?

	Yes	No	No opinion
*1. To increase pressure on enterprises to geographically align taxes paid in a country with actual profits, by enhanced scrutiny and decisions of either citizens or tax authorities (“enterprises should pay tax where they actually make profit”)	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

*6. To remedy market distortions based on corporate intransparency and multinational companies’ comparative advantage over SMEs when engaging in aggressive tax planning (“fairer competition between multinational enterprises and SMEs”)	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

2B) Would you add other objectives, and if so, which ones? Please explain briefly.

1000 character(s) maximum

(Please note: You will be asked to provide more detailed views on specific objectives in further questions)

All of the above listed objectives are very valid, although not easy to achieve neither as individual objectives nor in their totality.

Achieving all of these objectives would certainly lead to changes in both business structures and national tax policies.

It needs to be considered whether all of them can be achieved via a single transparency measure such as CbCR or whether achieving these objectives would rather require a complete overhaul of tax systems as a whole.

Whilst agreeing with the principles embodied the statements, their practical application could be difficult. To align taxation to where profits are made needs the identification of where profits are made - not easy for businesses dependent upon intangible assets. Also defining "tax avoidance" at an EU level is difficult, with significant national differences in viewpoint. Finally, we hope that Member State governments can be persuaded to stop harmful tax competition by other means than by "pressure".

3. The following options have been identified by the Commission services (Please note that certain options may be mutually exclusive).

Transparency towards tax authorities:

Note: OECD BEPS Action 13 recommends that, at State level, very large multinational enterprise (turnover > EUR750m) provide from 2017 onwards a Country-By-Country Report (CBCR) to the relevant tax authority. Tax authorities of G20 and OECD members will then exchange the CBCR submitted to them.

a. OPTION A: No EU Action

Please note that even if there is no EU action, some Member States may implement OECD BEPS Action 13 recommendations. This would allow tax authorities to obtain tax-related information and exchange that information with other participating countries. However, not all Member States may implement BEPS 13 – especially as not all EU Member States are OECD Members.

b. OPTION B: Implementation of BEPS 13 at EU level

The EU would recommend or require, as recommended by BEPS 13, that enterprise disclose tax-related information on a country-by-country basis to the relevant tax authorities. Each ultimate parent enterprise filing a tax return with any of the relevant EU tax authorities would be covered. Its own worldwide consolidated operations would be reported.

Transparency towards the public:

c. OPTION C: Publication of anonymised/aggregated data by the EU tax authorities

The EU would recommend or require the disclosure by enterprises of tax-related information to tax authorities (possibly based on BEPS 13 recommendations). Moreover, aggregated or anonymised data would be made available to the public in order for the public to have access to tax-related information.

d. OPTION D: Public disclosure of tax-related information by either enterprises or tax authorities

The EU would require enterprises to disclose tax-related information on a country-by-country basis. The information would be made available to the public either directly (e.g. as part of their annual reporting obligations) or by national tax authorities in, for example, a public register. This option may consist in extending to all sectors the country-by-country reporting requirements currently in place for financial institutions.

e. OPTION E: Publicly available corporate tax policies

The Commission would require enterprises to report on their approach towards tax compliance and planning (tax management).

3A) Are there other appropriate options in relation to extending corporate tax transparency, such as reporting requirements for tax advisors? Please explain briefly.

1000 character(s) maximum

This question is not clear in terms of “reporting requirements for tax advisors”. We would not support proposals that tax advisors report the legitimate tax planning activities of their clients as this would damage their relationship with their clients and, in certain countries or certain circumstances, this would require the lifting of client confidentiality and legal privilege.

If the suggestion is that tax advisors disclose so called aggressive tax schemes directly to tax authorities, this needs to be carefully considered in light of issues arising from similar requirements that already exist in certain countries and with the recommendations in BEPS Action 12.

We have not completed the table below. We regard it is being somewhat simplistic and to achieve many of the primary objectives there would need to be additional steps (either by a business decision or actions by legislators) other than enhanced transparency and more fundamental reforms of tax systems.

3B) Please rate below how well each option would achieve the identified primary objectives

Please use the following possibilities:

- Insert a + (plus) to indicate that the option achieves the objective
- Insert a 0 (zero) to indicate that the option has no effect with respect to the objective
- Insert a - (minus) to indicate that the option runs counter to the objective
- Leave empty to indicate that you have no opinion

	1. Enterprises should pay tax where they actually make profit	2. Member States should stop harmful tax competition	3. Help tax authorities orientate their audits on enterprises	4. E) Publicly available corporate tax policies
F) Other (as described in 3A)

3C) In your opinion, which would be the most appropriate option(s)?

Please select one or several options

- a. OPTION A: No EU Action
- b. OPTION B: Implementation of BEPS 13 at EU level
- c. OPTION C: Publication of anonymised/aggregated data by the EU tax authorities
- d. OPTION D: Public disclosure of tax-related information by enterprises
- e. OPTION E: Publicly available corporate tax policies

The following questions examine in more depth the possible features of each option, and their potential impacts

OPTION B - EU INITIATIVE ON TRANSPARENCY TOWARDS TAX AUTHORITIES, BASED ON OECD BEPS

This section examines the option where the EU would foster the BEPS 13 at EU level by way of an EU-specific initiative. Each ultimate parent enterprise filing a tax return with any of the relevant EU tax authorities would be covered. Its own worldwide consolidated operations would be reported. Ultimately, tax authorities would share this information.

Note: OECD BEPS Action 13 recommends that, at State level, very large multinational enterprise (turnover > EUR750m) provide from 2017 onwards a Country-By-Country Report (CBCR) to the relevant tax authority. Tax authorities of G20 and OECD members will then exchange the CBCR submitted to them.

4. What information should necessarily be disclosed by enterprises to the tax authorities?

Please select one or several options

- a. BEPS 13 information (Name, Nature of activities, Location, List of subsidiaries of the parent enterprise operating in each country, Revenue, Revenues split between related and unrelated parties, Number of employees, Profit or loss before tax, Income tax paid and accrued, Stated Capital, Accumulated earnings, Tangible assets)
- b. Public subsidies received
- c. Explanatory narrative information on tax-related information
- d. Other
- e. No opinion
- f. None

5. What EU entities should be covered?

Please select one single option

- a. Very large enterprises with revenue of EUR 750M or larger enterprises + (as recommended in the BEPS 13)
- b. At least large enterprises or groups (to be defined more specifically)
- c. Other
- d. No opinion

6. At enterprise level:

6A) How would you assess the extent to which enterprises will need to change their tax planning or structure as a result of being more transparent towards tax authorities?

Please select one single option

- a. This will have no effects on enterprises' tax planning
- b. This will ensure that enterprises comply with tax rules and do not use tax gaps, mismatches and/or loopholes in tax rules in order to minimise the taxes they pay
- c. Enterprises will voluntarily shift profits back to where they are generated so that they have to pay more taxes than they did before
- d. Other
- e. No opinion

Please specify in what other ways enterprises will need to change their tax planning or structure as a result of being more transparent towards tax authorities:

1000 character(s) maximum

There will be no one single consequence.
Many businesses will continue with their current business structure and tax planning arrangements, assured that they are both legal and reflect the entity's business model.
There may be other businesses that change the structure of their organisation, or its location, to better reflect where added value is generated. There may be other businesses that feel the need to review their current transfer pricing rules in anticipation of increased scrutiny from taxation authorities (this may more affect companies operating in jurisdictions whose tax authorities lack resources to thoroughly check transfer pricing calculations).

6B) Please explain which mechanism would incentivise enterprises to change:

1000 character(s) maximum

To ensure compliance, tax authorities and legislators currently often rely on scrutiny, either via tax audits or via public pressure.
In order to truly incentivise business to make business decisions that are not primarily influenced by tax considerations, a more fundamental reform would be required.
By aligning the tax base between different countries (such as is proposed by the CCCTB) and reducing as far as possible the disparity between rates of corporate business tax, the tax burden will have a reduced impact on business decisions. However, this would need more international cooperation than currently seen.
In the long term, a thorough rethink of the current tax systems (covering direct, indirect, corporate, personal and capital taxes) could help to incentivise behavioral change in taxpayers and also provide a system better suited to the challenges of the 21st century and beyond.

7. What consequences would further tax transparency towards tax authorities have in terms of public finance?

Please select one or several options

- a. Reallocation of tax bases within Europe
- b. Increase in tax paid in Europe
- c. Decrease in tax paid in Europe
- d. Increase in tax paid outside the EU
- e. Decrease in tax paid outside the EU
- f. Other

Please specify what other consequences would further tax transparency towards tax authorities have in terms of public finance:

1000 character(s) maximum

All of the above options are likely to occur - they are dependent on the business in question; its global business model, the location of its primary markets and suppliers and where its headquarters is located.

Although difficult to predict, possible impacts could include:

- A closer alignment of tax base to economic activity - reducing the tax base of countries offering certain incentives to business. However, this may not greatly affect, for example, the registration of intellectual property (particularly when tax incentives are offered);
- Some of the tax base could shift to non-EU countries by alerting their taxation authorities to possible profit shifting or transfer pricing issues, in particular countries producing raw materials/natural resources. However, this may also reduce dependence on external aid;
- A reduction in tax paid in non-EU countries that have used favourable tax regimes to attract business - increasing aid requirements.

Please explain briefly, if possible with figures, your answer on the possible further consequences tax transparency towards tax authorities would have in terms of public finance?:

1000 character(s) maximum

We believe that the primary objective of further transparency should be to increase fairness in taxation and to help countries collect the proper amount of tax due under their tax laws. It should not be used as a tool for tax authorities to increase the overall burden of tax paid.

The potential impact on public finance is difficult to predict and will very much depend on the degree to which, and the manner in which, countries use tax policy to attract business. As mentioned above, those countries providing incentives to relocate profits without matching underlying economic activity may find their tax yields reduce, whereas those offering generally low tax rates may find that their overall yield increases as businesses chose to move their investments to these countries.

8. Can you provide an estimation of any additional costs and resources that will be incurred by enterprises in preparing a consolidated CBCR in accordance with BEPS 13?

Please explain, with details of what information is not currently available and if possible with figures:

1000 character(s) maximum

We are unable to provide such information

9. What consequence would tax transparency towards tax authorities have in terms of fostering a growth friendly environment and the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest?

Please select one single option

- a. Constitute a feature of a growth friendly environment and foster the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest.
- b. No consequence
- c. Hamper the fostering of a growth friendly environment and negatively impact the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest.
- d. No opinion

Please explain briefly your answer on the consequence tax transparency towards tax authorities would have in terms of fostering a growth friendly environment and the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest:

1000 character(s) maximum

At this stage, we do not believe that it is possible to determine the impact that added tax transparency towards tax authorities will have in terms of fostering a growth friendly environment and of the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest. It is possible that this will become clearer once it is apparent how many countries adopt the BEPS proposals but at this stage we believe that there are too many uncertainties to provide a definitive answer.

OPTIONS C and D - EU INITIATIVE TOWARDS FURTHER PUBLIC TRANSPARENCY OF TAX-RELATED INFORMATION

This section examines the options where further tax-related information would be made fully or partially available to the public.

Reminder:

OPTION C: Publication of anonymised/aggregated data by the EU tax authorities.

The EU would recommend or require the disclosure by enterprises of tax-related information to tax authorities (possibly based on BEPS 13 recommendations). Moreover, aggregated or anonymised data would be made available to the public in order for the public to have access to tax-related information.

OPTION D: Public disclosure of tax-related information by either enterprises or tax authorities.

The EU would require enterprises to disclose tax-related information on a country-by-country basis. The information would be made available to the public either directly (e.g. as part of their annual reporting obligations) or by national tax authorities in, for example, a public register. This option may consist in extending to all sectors the country-by-country reporting requirements currently in place for financial institutions.

10. How would you describe the potential benefits / disadvantages of a public disclosure of information by enterprises as compared to disclosure towards tax authorities only?

Please explain briefly:

1000 character(s) maximum

Potential Benefits

1. An opportunity for business to clarify tax policies and their real world impact, perhaps with other corporate social responsibility disclosures. This may require more disclosure than BEPS Action 13 but, where audited, the information disclosed would enhance credibility.
2. A better informed public debate about corporate income tax.
3. Assisting those tax authorities with limited resources to address transfer pricing or tax avoidance issues.

Potential Disadvantages

1. Formulaic requirements could result in an overload of non-relevant information where useful information is lost or buried.
2. Misinterpretation of information leading to financial harm for the business affected - potentially mitigated by additional explanatory information at extra cost.
3. Very difficult to enforce on businesses based outside of the EEA - a possible competitive disadvantage for EU companies and a risk that they will relocate outside the EEA.

11. What information would it be absolutely necessary to include in a publicly available CBCR (option D)?

Please select as many options as necessary among the following 6 categories:

- Information required both under CRD IV and BEPS 13 (this information is already publicly disclosed by financial institutions):

- a. Name
- b. Nature of activities
- c. Location
- d. Revenue
- e. Number of employees
- f. Profit or loss before tax
- g. Income tax (paid and accrued)

- Additional BEPS 13 information (normally to be made available to tax authorities):

- h. Revenues split between related and unrelated parties
- i. Stated Capital
- j. Accumulated earnings
- k. Tangible assets
- l. List of subsidiaries of the parent enterprise operating in each country

- Additional information currently required from financial institutions:

- m. Public subsidies received

- Information normally exchanged between tax authorities:

- n. Tax rulings (based on definition as proposed by the Commission in March 2015)

- Options provided for in the Accounting Directive:

- o. Employees working through subcontractors
- p. Pecuniary tax-related penalties administered by a country

- Other tax-related information:

- q. Narratives explaining certain key features of the tax-related information
- r. None
- s. Other information
- t. No opinion

Please specify what other information would it be absolutely necessary to include in a publicly available CBCR:

1000 character(s) maximum

- a. Effective tax rate for the year
- b. Local tax rate applicable
- c. Total tax contribution (i.e. total taxes incurred by an entity, not just corporate taxes)

FEE also stresses that it is not just a question of which information should be included that is important but also where it is to be published. The main options appear to be publication in the annual report or in a separate report.

FEE believes that a separate report would be preferable. Annual reports are frequently criticised for being too long and complex and including country by country (CbC) tax information will increase this trend. Publication in a separate report, preferably online, would result in lower preparation costs and better utility. We recommend, particularly if the information is to be included in annual reports, that an international accounting standards setter (i.e. the IASB) be consulted in the process, both to make use of their expertise and also to ensure consistency with other financial information.

Please explain briefly your answer on what information would it be absolutely necessary to include in a publicly available CBCR:

1000 character(s) maximum

Tax systems at a local level are complex and difficult to understand - this is magnified by cross-border supply chains and increasing digitalisation of the economy. Presenting headline information (revenue, employee numbers, profit before tax and the tax charge) provides basic information but not enough to assess the tax situation of a complex business. An apparently low tax charge may indicate the existence of (aggressive) tax planning but could also reflect the utilisation of losses incurred in previous accounting periods or by capital investment subject to a deliberately favourable local tax regime.

This lack of utility would be further amplified if the information was required for all jurisdictions in which the entity operates, irrespective of the importance of the jurisdiction to the entity. Consequently, we believe that the relevance of the information disclosed would be increased by providing more detailed disclosure but only for material jurisdictions.

12. In the case of tax authorities publishing aggregated/anonymised information based on returns filed by enterprises with them (OPTION C), what information should be provided by those authorities (on a country-by-country basis)?

Please select one or several options

- a. Aggregated revenue
- b. Aggregated number of employees
- c. Aggregated income tax paid and accrued
- d. Aggregated tangible assets
- e. Ratio: Aggregated income tax paid or accrued/aggregated profit or loss before tax
- f. Ratio: Aggregated income tax paid or accrued/aggregated revenue

13. Would you or your organisation have an interest in receiving further corporate tax-related information (detailed or aggregated)?

Please select one single option

- Yes
- No
- No opinion

14. What entities should be covered?

14A) Size

Please select one single option

- a. Very large enterprises with revenue of EUR 750M or larger enterprises + (as recommended by the BEPS 13)
- b. At least large enterprises or groups (to be defined more specifically)
- c. Other
- d. No opinion

14B) Connection with EU markets

Please select one or several options

- a. Enterprises with securities listed in the EEA
- b. Enterprises established in the EEA
- c. If feasible, enterprises not established in the EEA and controlling operations in the EEA
- d. Other
- e. No opinion

Please explain briefly your answer on the connection with EU markets:

It is important that any measures introduced are applied to all groups of companies that fulfil the criteria for disclosure, regardless of the location of the headquarters or overall holding company. If the group fulfills the criteria, the disclosure rules should be applied to the relevant entity operating within in the EU in any form (i.e. branch or subsidiary) regardless of the size of the business carried on in the EU.

15. What operations should be covered?

Please select one single option

- a. Enterprises' operations within the EEA only
- b. Enterprises' operations in the EEA and outside the EEA when controlled from the EEA
- c. If feasible, enterprises' operations in the EEA and outside the EEA even if not controlled from the EEA.
- d. Other
- e. No opinion

Please explain briefly your answer on the cooperations that should be covered:

1000 character(s) maximum

For CbC reporting of tax matters to be meaningful and relevant it needs to deal with the entity's global operations, not just those within the EEA. Operations within the EEA that are controlled from third countries should be subject to the same requirements as those controlled from within the EEA, in order that EU businesses are not placed at a competitive disadvantage. Although extremely difficult to enforce, in an ideal world groups headquartered outside of the EEA would produce this same information for their worldwide operations and not just those entities that operate within the EEA.

16. Considering that the EU may have stricter rules on tax transparency towards the public than other countries, is there a risk of placing enterprises established/listed in the EU at a competitive disadvantage vis-à-vis non-EU multinational companies operating in the EU?

Please select one single option

- Yes
- No
- No opinion

What would be the scale and consequences of such a disadvantage?

Please explain briefly:

1000 character(s) maximum

There is a risk that if only EU based businesses are required to provide such public disclosure they may find themselves the focus of more attention from tax authorities in third countries that have not adopted the OECD BEPS proposals than businesses based outside the EU. This could lead to additional costs for EU businesses and maybe also to a shift of the tax base from the EU to 3rd countries.

Additionally, EU businesses may suffer from the misinterpretation, intentional or otherwise, of the information disclosed, bringing with it the possibility of reputational harm and economic damage.

We are unable to quantify the potential scale of these risks.

What could be done to mitigate the risk?

Please explain briefly:

1000 character(s) maximum

Before any additional disclosure requirements are introduced in the EU, there should be an adequate interval in order to assess what impact the OECD's BEPS project has on the global tax environment and the degree to which it is adopted globally. Only at this stage can it be properly assessed if additional public disclosure of tax information is useful and the degree to which it may negatively impact on EU businesses.

If additional disclosure is deemed necessary, the information required should be properly balanced to ensure sufficient detail to provide relevant and meaningful information that is as free as possible from misinterpretation yet without placing an undue burden on the businesses that have to provide the information. Materiality should be considered in order to avoid undue costs, production of formulaic disclosures and information overload.

17. Is there a risk that tax transparency towards the public could have other unintended negative consequences on companies?

18. Would you expect measures for enhanced public transparency on tax information in the EU to have an impact on relations with third countries (Developing countries, OECD members, ...)?
Please explain briefly:

1000 character(s) maximum

There is a possibility that enhanced public disclosure could result in a different dynamic between EU Member States and 3rd countries. This could particularly be the case for resource rich 3rd countries that depend on raw material exports and those with a manufacturing base largely derived from multi-national entities. Such countries would have access to information at a level that may have been previously unavailable to their tax authorities and could lead to pressure to move at least some element of the tax base from within the EEA to these 3rd countries. On the other hand, long term benefit could be derived from the EU's leadership on this matter being used as a driver for enhanced transparency in these 3rd countries.

19. At enterprise level:

19A) How would you assess the extent to which enterprises will need to change their tax planning following further tax transparency towards the public?

Please select one single option

- a. This will have no effects on enterprises' tax planning
- b. This will ensure that enterprises comply with tax rules and do not use tax gaps, mismatches and/or loopholes in tax rules in order to minimise the taxes they pay
- c. Enterprises will voluntarily shift profits back to where they are generated so that they have to pay more taxes than they did before
- d. Other
- e. No opinion

Please specify in what other ways enterprises will need to change their tax planning following further tax transparency towards the public:

1000 character(s) maximum

It is likely that public disclosure of tax information will impel some enterprises to change their tax planning strategy, as described above. We believe that the main impact of enhanced public disclosure will be that multi-national businesses make more disclosures as to their tax policies and tax planning and also review their communication and corporate governance policies. They will need to better explain their tax policies to the public in order to minimise as far as possible any negative consequences arising from the misinterpretation of the tax information disclosed.

19B) Please explain which mechanism would incentivise enterprises to change? In particular, please specify to what extent a public disclosure would have a greater effect than a submission only to tax authorities?

1000 character(s) maximum

As mentioned above, enhanced disclosure to tax authorities may produce some changes in business structures and tax strategies through increased scrutiny. Public disclosure may produce a further incentive to make such changes - this will largely depend on the national importance of tax policy in the public debate on public finances. In those jurisdictions where tax policy is publically debated, there is a possibility that public disclosure of tax information could result in a larger and quicker change in business structures and tax strategies, due to the economic impact of reputational harm and as a result of legislation introduced because of public pressure. One potential risk from this is that unilateral legislation at a national level is introduced without considering its impact on other countries, multi-national businesses or current international initiatives.

In the longer term, a fundamental reform of the tax system could be the best means to incentivise enterprises to change.

20. What additional effect, if any, on public finance would tax transparency towards the public have in addition to transparency for tax authorities only?

Please select one or several options

- a. Reallocation of tax bases within Europe
- b. Increase in tax paid in Europe
- c. Decrease in tax paid in Europe
- d. Increase in tax paid outside the EU
- e. Decrease in tax paid outside the EU
- f. Other
- g. No opinion

Please specify what other additional effect tax transparency towards the public would have on public finance in addition to transparency for tax authorities only:

1000 character(s) maximum

As with our answer to 7B), we believe that the primary objective of further transparency (to tax authorities or public) should be to increase fairness in taxation and to help countries collect the proper amount of tax due under their tax laws. It should not be used as a tool for tax authorities to increase the overall burden of tax paid. The potential impact on public finance is difficult to predict and will very much depend on the degree to which, and the manner in which, countries use tax policy to attract business and the degree to which tax policy is a matter of public debate. Public disclosure of such information may result in a change in the overall amount of corporate income tax collected but at this stage it is difficult to judge whether the corporation tax yield will increase or decrease or be reallocated within or outside Europe.

21. What consequence would tax transparency towards the public have in terms of fostering a growth friendly environment and the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest?

Please select one single option

- a. Constitute a feature of a growth friendly environment and foster the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest.
- b. No consequence
- c. Hamper the fostering of a growth friendly environment and negatively impact the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest.
- d. No opinion

Please explain briefly your answer on the consequence tax transparency towards the public would have in terms of fostering a growth friendly environment and the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest:

1000 character(s) maximum

At this stage, we do not believe that it is possible to determine the impact that public tax transparency will have in terms of fostering a growth friendly environment and of the attractiveness of the EU as a place to invest. Recently certain business sectors and individual businesses that have either been compelled to or have voluntarily chosen to publicly disclose such information. A better picture of the potential impact of more public transparency across all business sectors may become available once the impact of these existing measures and voluntary disclosure by individual businesses can be assessed.

22. Should the information prepared by enterprises be specifically verified by an independent assurance service provider (e.g. an auditor)?

Please select one single option

- a. No, the information should not be verified
- b. Limited verification is needed (existence of such report, consistency check)
- c. Extensive verification is needed (e.g. audited)
- d. Other
- e. No opinion

23. Should there be additional safeguards in terms of specific rules for the protection of data and business secrets?

Please note that in the absence of specific rules, the EU general EU data protection rules would apply.

Please select one single option

- Yes
- No
- No opinion

If so, which safeguard are necessary in relation to which types of information?

Please explain briefly:

1000 character(s) maximum

We trust that the proposed directive on the “protection of undisclosed know-how and business information (trade secrets) against their unlawful acquisition, use and disclosure” will adequately address the protection of EU trade and scientific secrets and other confidential and commercially sensitive information.

24. Please estimate additional costs and resources entailed by the introduction of further transparency measures for enterprises compared to an implementation of OECD BEPS Action 13 at national level and identify information which is not currently available. You may distinguish between additional cost for public authorities and additional costs for enterprises, based on your preferred option(s).

Please explain, if possible with figures:

1000 character(s) maximum

We are unable to provide such an estimate.

OPTION E - EU INITIATIVE TOWARDS PUBLIC TRANSPARENCY OF CORPORATE TAX POLICY

This section examines the option where enterprises would make public statements regarding their policy/approach towards tax management. This is not part of the OECD BEPS 13 initiative.

25. Would you support a mandatory description of tax management policies by enterprises?

Please select one single option

- a. Yes, instead of any public disclosure of tax-related information
- b. Yes, in addition to further public disclosure of tax-related information
- c. No
- d. No opinion

Please explain briefly your answer on your possible support a mandatory description of tax management policies by enterprises:

1000 character(s) maximum

We would recommend that enterprises disclose their tax management policies as best practice and also believe that more enterprises would chose to do so voluntarily if compelled to provide additional public disclosures. We do not believe that this should be made mandatory as it could lead to additional administrative burdens and the production of meaningless reports for those businesses where tax policy is not a key area.
